An evening with Chris Barker, author of "Learn SwiftUI"

Abstract:

SwiftUI is the new UI framework revealed by Apple during WWDC'19 for developing apps targeting iOS, iPadOS, and watchOS. With its declarative syntax, SwiftUI promises to streamline development for a new generation of apps.

However, learning SwiftUI comes with its share of challenges for all developers, both novice and experienced. Quality resources that will teach us how to make the best use out of this exciting technology are very much needed.

Chris Barker, our guest for this session, will present his book "Learn SwiftUI", where he makes it easy and accessible for everyone to get started with SwiftUI.

Join the session to learn more about SwiftUI, learn about Chris' process to write the book, and for a chance to win a free eBook. Even if you are not lucky to get one of the 10 copies that will be given away by Packt, you will nevertheless get an exclusive promo code for a discount.

Speaker: Chris Barker

Chris Barker is a senior iOS developer and tech lead for fashion retailer N Brown (JD Williams, SimplyBe, Jacamo), where he heads the iOS team, building apps for their major brands. Having now worked in the IT industry for over 22 years, Chris started his career developing .NET applications for online retailer dabs.com (now BT Shop).

In 2014, he made his move into mobile app development with digital agency Openshadow based in MediaCityUK. Here, he worked on mobile apps for clients such as Louis Vuitton and L'Oréal Paris. Chris often attends and speaks at his local iOS developer meetup, NSManchester.

Most recently, Chris attended Malaga Mobile in Spain, where he spoke about his passion for accessibility in mobile apps. Over the past 2 years, Chris has been a regular speaker at CodeMobile Developer Conference and plans to return in the future.
